Scan Safe: Avoid QR code fraud

Chennai, Jun 4: While digital payments have revolutionized the daily life for millions of Indians, there are also growing instances of payment frauds. One increasingly common tactic is QR code fraud, where scammers can steal your money without needing your card or bank account details directly. Here's how QR Code Fraud works: The fraudster sends you a picture of a QR code on a messaging app. The message might entice you to scan the code, enter an amount, and enter your UPI PIN to claim a free reward in your bank account. Alternatively, scammers might use apps that generate pre-filled QR codes requiring only your UPI PIN. In either scenario, entering your PIN authorizes a payment, draining money from your account. When you find yourself in a situation like this, PhonePe's cyber safety experts share some crucial tips to avoid falling into the QR code trap. Please note, you never have to 'Pay' or enter your UPI pin to receive money on PhonePe. A genuine sender only requires your phone number to send you money. If you receive a message like this, do not respond. Instead, contact PhonePe Support on the app to report the phone number and other details of the fraudster. Here's what you need to remember to stay safe from frauds: PhonePe never asks for confidential details. If you are asked for such details by anyone posing as a PhonePe representative, please ask them to send you an email. Only respond to emails from @phonepe.com domain. In case you have been duped by a scammer, you can immediately report such scams on the PhonePe app or by calling the customer care number, or on PhonePe's social media handles. Lastly, you can report fraud complaints at the nearest Cyber Crime cell or register a complaint online at <https://www.cybercrime.gov.in/> or contact the Cyber Crime Cell helpline on 1930.

Adani One, ICICI Bank launch credit cards with airport-linked benefits

Chennai, Jun 4: Adani One and ICICI Bank today launched India's first co-branded credit cards with airport-linked benefits in collaboration with Visa. Available in two variants – Adani One ICICI Bank Signature Credit Card and Adani One ICICI Bank Platinum Credit Card – they offer a comprehensive and substantial reward programme. The cards come with a plethora of benefits designed to enhance the cardholders' lifestyle and elevate their airport and travel experience. They offer up to 7% Adani Reward Points on spends across the Adani Group consumer ecosystem like Adani One app, where one can book flights, hotels, trains, buses, and cabs;

Adani-managed airports; Adani CNG pumps; Adani Electricity bills, and Trainman, an online train booking platform. Interestingly, the rewards are uncapped. The cards also offer an array of benefits, including welcome benefits like free air tickets and airport privileges like premium lounge access, Pranaam Meet & Greet Service, porter, valet and premium car parking. Card users also get privileges like discounts on shopping at duty free outlets and on F&B spends at the airports, and benefits like free movie tickets and Adani Reward Points on groceries, utilities, and international spends. This strategic partnership marks the Adani Group's maiden venture into the financial sector, leveraging its unmatched reputation for excellence and innovation. With a vision to redefine the landscape of consumer finance, Adani One aims to set new standards by joining forces with ICICI Bank and Visa. This partnership aims to provide customers with an enhanced and seamless payment experience while unlocking a world of exclusive privileges. Through this collaboration, Adani One is committed to empowering individuals, ensuring they have access to the financial tools and resources needed to thrive in today's dynamic economy. Jeet Adani, Director, Adani Group, expressed his enthusiasm at the launch event, saying, "This unique partnership

Drinking, napping on long haul flights not good for the heart

New Delhi, June 4: Drinking and napping on long haul flights may not be good for the heart, even among the young and healthy, finds a study on Tuesday. Together, this can lower the amount of oxygen in the blood (SpO2) and increase the heart rate for a protracted period, revealed the study, published online in the respiratory journal Thorax. This may increase with higher alcohol consumption, particularly among the elderly with pre-existing medical conditions. "Atmospheric pressure decreases exponentially with altitude, causing a drop in blood oxygen saturation level to around 90 per cent (73 hPa) in healthy passengers at cruising altitude," said researchers from the German Aerospace Center in Cologne, Germany. A further drop in SpO2 is defined as hypobaric hypoxia -- or low blood oxygen level at higher altitude.

"Alcohol relaxes blood vessel walls, increasing the heart rate during sleep, an effect similar to that of hypobaric hypoxia," the researchers said, suggesting to "consider limiting alcohol on long haul flights". The study randomly allocated 48 people to two groups -- half were assigned to a sleep lab under normal ambient air pressure conditions (sea level) and half to an altitude chamber that mimicked cabin pressure at cruising altitude (2,438 m above sea level). Twelve in each group slept for 4 hours, having drunk alcohol and not having drunk. "The results indicate that, even in young and healthy individuals, the combination of alcohol intake with sleeping under hypobaric conditions poses a considerable strain on the cardiac system and might lead to exacerbation of symptoms in patients with cardiac or pulmonary diseases," said the researchers.

Understanding Leukemia - From Diagnosis to Living a Healthy Life

Leukemia is a disease that affects millions of lives daily and presents unique challenges across its various types. Among these, Chronic Myeloid Leukemia (CML) stands out as a form of blood cancer that affects the bone marrow. According to the National Institute of Health, approximately 1.2 to 1.5 million people worldwide are currently living with CML, a figure on the rise in India as well. Dr Steve Thomas MD, DM, Sri Ramachandra Medical Centre "From my observation, I have seen a 50% number of patients undergo severe emotional distress due to CML. However, patients diagnosed in the chronic phase, where the disease is more controllable, can lead fulfilling lives despite the challenges. It's crucial to remain proactive in managing CML since untreated chronic phase CML can progress rapidly within a few years. To ensure the effectiveness of your treatment and prevent disease progression, it's essential to monitor your BCR-ABL levels regularly and adhere to treatment goals. Counseling is also a vital aspect of helping patients manage the emotional and psychological challenges of living with a chronic illness. Additionally, discussing the latest therapies with your doctor can help you comprehend the treatment journey and attain a better quality of life".

CML manifests as the uncontrolled growth of white blood cells within the bone marrow. It progresses through three distinct phases: chronic, accelerated, and blast. The chronic phase, that can last for many years, encompasses around 90% of CML diagnoses. While some individuals with chronic phase CML experience symptoms, others remain asymptomatic. However, most symptoms tend to subside once treatment begins. Once diagnosed, continuous monitoring BCR-ABL levels is important to understand the treatment efficacy and evolving symptoms over time, especially since untreated chronic phase CML can progress within three to four years of diagnosis. CML is often called the "good cancer" because it has become more manageable over the last 20 years. However, for some, dealing with CML isn't always easy. In fact, as the disease progresses, CML can stop being a 'good cancer.' Some people might develop resistance to their CML medications or have side effects that affect their daily life. This shows why it's important to track things regularly—not just to check the diagnosis but also to spot any patterns that might need changes in treatment, especially for those facing challenges with managing their CML.

Hand in Hand conducts Environment Day symposium

Chennai, Jun 4: Hand in Hand India (HiHI), a not-for-profit public charitable trust working towards poverty alleviation through job creation since 2004, organised the World Environment Day Symposium, in Chennai. The event that saw the participation of stakeholders from across the country provided a platform for leading environmental experts, academics, corporates, and policymakers to disseminate knowledge, discuss pertinent environmental challenges and collaborate on solutions for pressing environmental challenges. The symposium was attended by 100 participants across corporates, NGOs, institutions and other stakeholders. Dr. Rajendra Singh, better known as the "Waterman of India" and winner of prestigious accolades such as the Ramon Magsaysay Award, Jnanpith Award, and the Stockholm Water Prize, called for concerted and concrete environmental protection efforts from stakeholders for sustainable future. Justice Dr. P. Jyothimani, former Judicial Member - National Green Tribunal and former Judge - Madras High Court, said, "Development and sustainability must go hand in hand. All life deserves respect, including plants and animals. Plants and animals are more sensitive than humans. We need to go to children, go to schools and teach them the importance of waste segregation, water and environmental conservation. We have to target children to ensure change."

Madhya Pradesh Chief Minister Mohan Yadav along with his family visited Chidambaram Natarajar temple. He was welcomed by the temple dikshitars. Then he went around the temple with his family and worshiped lord Natarajar. Later, the dikshitars presented prasadam to them. Subsequently, MP CM signed the register of special guests.
